

LOYOLA eCOMMONS
SAMPLE LETTER TO PUBLISHER REQUESTING PERMISSION TO DEPOSIT ARTICLE

Dear [insert name of publisher's rights manager or similar],

I am a contributing author to one of your journals, and I am writing to ask permission to deposit a copy of the article(s) listed below in Loyola eCommons, Loyola University Chicago's institutional repository (<http://ecommons.luc.edu>).

The article is:

[authors names] , [date], [title]

[journal name], [volume or number], [pages]

Loyola eCommons is an academic, not-for-profit resource created to preserve and provide access to research, scholarship, and creative works created by the university community for the benefit of Loyola students, faculty, staff, and the larger academic community. Loyola will make the submission available using a Creative Commons "Attribution / Non-commercial / No derivative works" license, which means that the article cannot be used commercially or changed in any way, and any authorized use must be properly attributed. Full bibliographic details are given for each article, including the journal of original publication, etc.

If possible, I would like to use the finalized PDF version as it appears in print and online. The PDF version has an advantage over my own version, in that it maintains consistency in appearance of the article wherever it is read. This also maintains a closer association of the article with the journal, through the running headers and the journal house-style.

I would be grateful if you could contact me to give your permission for including this article and to pass on any conditions that are associated. If it would be possible to use the published PDF version of the article for this purpose, then please confirm this.

Thank you for your attention, and I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,
